Happenings at the High Plains Museum...

The High Plains Museum is hosting the traveling exhibit "The Tuskegee Airmen; The Segregated Skies of World War II" from the Museum of History and Holocaust Education. Also on display is an exhibit featuring WWII veterans from Sherman County.

The traveling exhibit is a ten-poster exhibit that explores the history and heroism of the first African American pilots to fly in combat during WWII. Between 1941 and 1946, what became known as the "Tuskegee experiment" trained more than 1,000 pilots. Although required to train and fight in segregated units, the Tuskegee Airmen proved to be some of the most skilled aviators during the war. The undeniable courage and skill of these brave pilots contributed to the desegregation of the United States Armed Forces in 1948. This exhibit offers a look into the historical challenges and triumphs of these unsung American heroes.

The local exhibit explores Sherman County life, veterans who served their country and the Glider Pilot training center that was located in Goodland in 1942. Also featured is a series of prints on loan from James Ross depicting air battles during WWII. This exhibit will run through the month of September. Stay tuned for possible programs during the month of September in the paper, radio and Facebook.
